Subject: Comment on Net metering

I believe Net metering to be the single most effective policy Vermont has implemented to encourage the adoption of renewables in the state. It gives individuals the opportunity to take action on climate change in a meaningful and effective way. Larger community net metered projects give schools, municipalities, affordable housing projects and individuals who do not have the means or site for a solar project of their own to contribute to the fight on climate change. I strongly support the current net metering rules and hope the commission does not weaken them. I do not believe that all of the benefits of solar have been included in the cost/benefit analysis to date and I believe that we need to do everything we can to ramp up the adoption of renewables. We have no time to lose. Sincerely ~Fran Pomerantz Richmond, Vermont
