The clean air act is a joke farce because the politicians are pushing all electric energy which is not a good way to heat living in the northeast.

They promote pellet stoves, no-heat pumps and burning wood vs. oil heat but you need electricity to run two of these appliances. Wood and pellet stoves make smoke and soot. So it's the precursor of coal.

When you have no electricity you will have no heat. You will have no way to drive anywhere because the fancy/ridiculous electric vehicles will be dead.

Pipes freeze and your home or apartment will be ruined. Going to a "warming shelter" is a dangerous idea if you don't want to be robbed and your pets will freeze to death while you are gone. Stupid!

The average person cannot afford all these fancy unreliable things the legislature is proposing and common sense will tell you that you need to have several forms of energy to survive in a natural disaster which includes our annual deep freeze. The argument that the state is getting warmer cannot be proven to be a future reality because the earth is a dynamic environment where climate has been changing since the beginning of the planet. (Thankfully because it would be hell keeping the dinosaurs out of the garden and keeping my dogs and chickens safe).

My suggestion is follow the money. Whenever the agenda is so thick with political rhetoric and push, it's usually big money behind the scenes. Not to be made by the average citizens either.
