In these days of social economic hardships for many citizens of VT and the irony of how electricity is produced (not helping the “environment”) and its unreliability, how can you as elected officials be so naive and ignorant about how in the northern states new several power sources to keep ourselves alive during critical periods of natural disasters and electric outages. The technology is not up to standard for this pipe dream you are proposing. Don't you see the ignorance in supporting pellet stoves (electric necessity) and wood burning stoves as being on the list for clean energy as they produce significant carbon waste.

People are believing this malarkey and drinking the Koolaid while supporting the politicians who are responsible for this mess. Ignorance at its best!

The waste and resources needed to provide solar power is just as bad for the environment as the fossil fuels. You can't fool science.

I suggest you follow the money trail and see which local government officials and national government officials are lining their pockets with shareholdings they have created and bought from the pursuit of this corrupt agenda.

If you can prosecute Martha Stewart for insider dealings you surely can get convictions for these people who are supporting this bill and other bills which are directed towards this agenda. Unless you too are part of the problem. Aren't we all just carbon based anomalies?

Follow the money.
