It seems as though the PUC hasn't come up with a clear model to put forward. Why would the legislature vote on something that isn't clear to the public. This is beyond reason. I've had a bunch of my friends sell their houses and moved to a different state because of this foolishness. We are one of the cleanest (air and water) states in the US. Why are our legislators passing laws that will keep people from coming to our state? Governor Scott has worked his hardest to welcome new people here but the legislature has tied his hands. If this becomes law, they will put many senior citizens of Vt. in harm's way. I've traveled to forty five different countries during my twenty eight years in the military and there is no country that tries to take care of the environment more than ours. They are worried about keeping warm in the winter and taking care of their families which don't have enough food. If we don't have any people the environment won't have to worry about being clean. Let's use some common sense with our state, we are not California.
